If you plan to use the services of a dealer or contractor, take care to choose one with a reputation for honesty and good workmanship. There are several ways to check on a contractor:
• Consult your local Chamber of Commerce, the Better Business Bureau, state attorney general, or local consumer protection agency.
• Talk with people for whom he has done work.
• Ask to see samples of his work. Pictures are a help; better yet is to go and get an actual tour of a home that he's worked on.
• Check his place of business to see that he is not a fly-by-night operator.
• Find out, if you can, how he rates with known building-product distributors and wholesale suppliers.
• Ask friends and relatives for names of firms that they could recommend.
